From the Minister

Beloveds,

From UUA President Rev. Susan Frederick-Gray

"We must not turn away.

These are the days we are living in. Days that force us to consider how we combat the cruelty that would disperse tear gas (a chemical weapon banned in war) at children and parents, at refugees and migrants? How do we build more pathways of love and peace in this world? Where can we bring our broken hearts, our aching, doubting, exhausted spirits? How do we upend the messages of fear and cruelty that bring us further into violence and death? How can we be powerful activists for love and humanity?

We must not turn away.

A culture of cruelty has taken deep root in the United States. It is not new. It has long been planted in rhetoric and policies of dehumanization and systems of hate.

We must not turn away.

The only way through is showing up again each day with love and the fullness of our interconnected humanity; unwilling to let this violence and cruelty go unnamed or unchecked. Unwilling to let it cripple or stifle our capacity for kindness, gentleness and solidarity, we will not turn away.

Love is the future. Not hate and not fear. To this end, I share this prayer with you:

Spirit of life, spirit of creation, give us courage for the days ahead and the strength to keep siding with love, to keep showing up for justice and peace, in solidarity and hope. Spirit of life, spirit of creation, give us moments of deep connection, of friendship and family, of faith and joy, of deep caring to renew us and remind us of the good that is within us and possible for us all.

Blessed be."

With Much Love,

Rev. Maria Cristina

REFLECTIONS – COMMUNICATION REVISITED

George Bernard Shaw reportedly said, “The problem with communication is the illusion that it has happened.” On Sunday, October 13, about 50 people gathered in the Sanctuary and were privileged to have Sharon Strand Ellison, author of Taking the War Out of our Words: The Art of Powerful Non-Defensive Communication to teach us about her unique approach to communication. We were surprised to learn how quickly we can be triggered by becoming defensive before we even realize it.

I am reminded of what my piano teacher said when I was impatient with learning a new, difficult piano piece. I had to practice, practice, practice. We had a very small exposure to the changes that Sharon has developed. Perhaps we could view it as a tasting menu; an exposure or small taste to help us become acquainted with this unique approach to communication. Ellison offered us a model of communication that uses curiosity, clarity, and openness instead of interrogation, confrontation, and coercion. She demonstrated how making simple changes in voice, tone, body language, phrasing, and intention can defuse defensiveness, often instantly, even in high-conflict situations.

For those who were unable to attend the workshop, here is the handout of language samples to demonstrate the difference between defensive and non-defensive communication – open the following link:

<http://www.pndc.com/documents/summary-sheet-english.pdf>

To learn more, some members of the Adult RE Committee purchased her CD and found it helpful. Another member found an Introductory Workbook that was free of charge that provided an introduction, overview, specific ways to ask non-defensive questions and making non-defensive-statements, making predictions, and the importance of voice and tone. http://www.pndc.com/documents/ADR\_PNDC\_Introductory\_Workbook.pdf

This Introductory Workbook walks you through the rationale for her unique approach, compares and contrasts the War Model of Communication with that of Non-Defensive Communication and provides many examples of Non-Defensive Questions, Non-Defensive Statements, and Predication Statements.

Ellison reminds us not to put too much emphasis on proper technique or trying to do each step every time we practice (Taking the War out of our Words, p. 237). Rather, be willing to learn, to acknowledge that developing new skills takes time and practice.

- Are you curious? Are you willing to learn more? The Powerful Non-Defensive Communication Web-site <http://pndc.com> is a good place to begin. It is a wealth of information about her background, her book, audio CDs and downloads. If you are someone who learns best by seeing and listening, you may also find Playlist of YouTube videos featuring Sharon (<https://bit.ly/2NYEkBe>) helpful.

Our third session on Sunday, January 20, will discuss “The Eternity Factor” by examining the perspectives of death and dying from a Buddhism, Judaism, and Christianity perspective. We’ll discuss the impact of the death of family and friends. We’ll look at Jung’s elder archetype of the Crone and Earth Centered Traditions of the Grandmother Lodge.

While many people write a Last Will and Testament to deal with earthly possessions, we will explore the writing of an Ethical Will. Barry K. Baines, M.D., in his book, Ethical Wills – Putting your Values on Paper, (2nd edition, 2006, Da Capo Life Long – a member of the Perseus Books Group) describes the Ethical Will as an ancient custom of passing on personal values, beliefs, blessings, and advice to future generations (pg. 1). In his book he talks about asking his father to write an ethical will and its meaning for him. We’ll use Baines work to provide a guide to the Why, When, and How, of writing an Ethical Will as well as his guidance in preparing, caring, for and sharing your Ethical Will. A discussion guide will be placed in the Community Room early in January

The Adult Religious Exploration Committee meets on the second Tuesday of the month from 11 am to 12 noon in the Conference Room. Please feel free to contact Diane Meyerson, Kathryn LaMar, Ethel-May Shaw, Shelia McClellan, Nancy Bonner-Benson, or Mileva Saulo Lewis, for further information.

RE Reflections

Keeping the flame of multigenerational cooperation burning bright

Since the beginning of the church year we been working well together to include all ages in our community activities. We started the year off with a fun family picnic. We held monthly multigenerational worship services where children have been an active part of the worship services. We joined together with the Peace & Justice Action committee to support Kids Against Hunger. And our technology experts have been working with the kids to use solar energy to power up the computers for our coding workshops.

We the teachers, parents and Re Council Members are so thankful to all of the committees & members who work to include our children and families. These include music, worship, social justice and green committees as well as interior, grounds & safety committees.

The most recent example of community cooperation is the “Kid’s Garden” project that was initiated by groundskeeper, Walt Korus. Walt came to me with his idea to create a kid’s garden in one of the clearings on the upper property. After consulting with some members who are avid gardeners and members of the green committee, it was decided to put together some planter boxes that the children could use to practice sowing seeds and harvesting plants, to better understand the plant life cycle and what it takes to grow and care for living things.

A couple of weeks ago, Shiela McClellan, Lorie Miller and Walt Korus, guided the kids in planting garlic, onions and some winter lettuces & kale. We plan to have a harvesting lesson in the spring to reap what we have sown. When you get a chance, take a stroll up to the upper grounds and check out our garden project!

On Sunday, December 16, at 5 pm we will gather to celebrate a beloved Latin American Christmas tradition known as Las Posadas. This event is in solidarity with all people fleeing violence and seeking refuge. Now more than ever, we recommit ourselves to becoming a living Sanctuary, opening the doors of our hearts and of our churches to welcome all immigrants.

We will process by candlelight in our neighborhood singing carols and afterwards will enjoy a community feast at the church. There will be piñatas and fun activities for the entire family. Join us!

Winter Solstice Service on Friday, December 21 at 7 pm: A contemplative evening service offering respite, soothing music, and the comfort of community.

Are you thinking about becoming a Member? Those of you who are frequent attendees but have not yet become official members are invited to reach out to Rev. Maria Cristina or Bob Simoni, the chair of the Hospitality & Membership Committee, to find out more about the privileges and responsibilities of becoming a member at Starr King. Once the decision to join is made, it's just a matter of signing the Membership Book. We are planning a special service on January 13 to welcome and introduce the members who have joined in the past year; we will have a cake celebration afterwards.
